Dr Hatton and Panel members,

I have been working for oil and gas projects in over the world for about past 20 years and have been involved several unconventional gas projects not limited to in Australia but also in Africa, North America, Middle East and Japan. If my understanding correct, thousands of fracking operations have been conducted but serious environmental damage were not reported as long as an appropriate operational were done. From the viewpoint of revitalizing industry and creation of employment in remote area, gas development with fracking operation bring them significant benefits, profit, advantage etc.

Through this scientific inquiry, I strongly hope that appropriate and fair investigation results will be announced and appropriate policies will be formulated based on these scientific inquiry results.

Yours sincerely
